A Look Forward

Expectation is confident of an indicated winter wheat yield, subject to average depreciation, of 5.000,000 bushels, almost rivalling the record self of last season, and there is still to come the ming wheat harvest of possibly 300,000,000 bushels. At even less than the current price of, say, $1.50 per bushel, we may well congratulate ourselves.

It should be recognized just what this single factor means to the early business future of the United States in turning the wheels of trade.

The railroads alone are troubled; and, thoughtful fair-minded men feel concern for them. They must provide transportation of the promised crops and the resultant exchange of manufactured goods, and it is a matter of general knowledge that still under the burden of reduced income and increased expenses, due in large part to oppressive laws, they are not in funds for their necessities. With indomitable courage and true public spirit they are doing the best they can.

Whatever the outcome of the present world crisis, however, all sound and patriotic thinkers must agree with the Harriman National Bank in their conclusions with reference to the economic position of this country. These are times for conndent preparation for the future.

The Harriman National Bank, conservative yet constructive in its policy, would have the community remember that there is no likely impairment of the almost irresistible forces that are working in this country for business progress.
